

Rochester

Michael Anastassiades

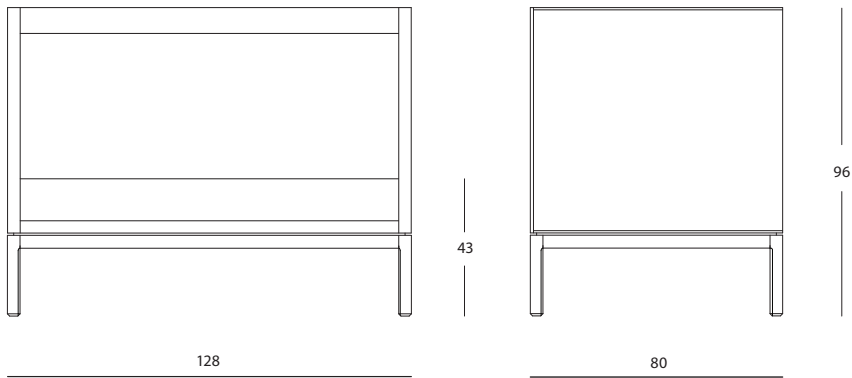

A design that grew from an inquisitiveness about how modern behaviour is changing the way we use public furniture, where people are now inclined to be working or engaging with media on personal devices. Rochester creates a comfortable enclosure for the user, a place for a little privacy. The design language is strict and formal, but comfort has also been made a priority. It is made from oak-veneered side and back panels with a solid oak plinth.

An accompanying ottoman follows the same language as the sofa, but is slightly firmer so it can be used as a seat, foot rest or a side table.

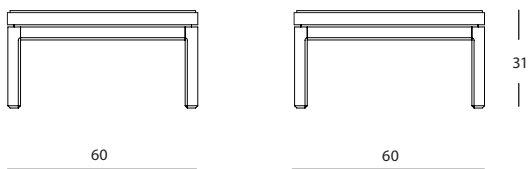

Made in Norfolk, England.
